

Welcome to the Museum Access INSIDER Newsletter!

Each month, our newsletter will bring you information about our museum visits, the inside scoop of what goes on behind-the-scenes, and other fun museum insider tips. Thanks for watching MUSEUM ACCESS.....Where Every Visit is an Adventure!

Learning Resources for Adventurers

Did you know that you can use Museum Access in the classroom or at home as a learning tool? Our free downloadable "fun sheets" accompany each Museum

Access episode and include fun facts and DIY projects. Check out this one that follows the Saturday Night Live: 'The Experience' exhibit episode at the Museum of Science and Broadcast Communications where we challenge adventurers 7+ to create a storyboard using their own character, script and performance. Giggle, laugh and perform with this activity!

Out and About...

Leslie recently had a chance to chat with WGN-TV entertainment reporter and radio host, Dean Richard, at the Museum of Broadcast Communications. As Leslie noted, "It's always fun talking to someone who has his finger on the pulse of Chicago's exciting entertainment world."

Today, traveling exhibits are becoming an integral part of the museum experience across America. They give guests the opportunity to explore and experience something new. These exhibits can highlight new developments in technology, pop culture icons and historical artifacts. They can also attract new visitors of all ages.

The Smithsonian Institute Traveling Exhibition Service (SITES) is a great resource to check out some of the tour schedules. Click here to view.

Behind-the-Scenes

"The beautiful red tailed hawk 'Zehpher' was a bit camera shy that summer day when we were at the Wild Center Nature Museum in Tupper Lake, NY. What a treat to see him in flight during a training session with curator, Leah Valerio. He has since been released to the wild and is enjoying his freedom in the beautiful Adirondacks."

Host, Leslie Mueller
