MUSEUM ACCESS MOMENT

One of the summer's hit movies has been OPPENHEIMER. We were particularly interested in seeing it after visiting the National Museum of Nuclear Science & History in Albuquerque, NM. The Jim Sanborn exhibit, 'Critical Assembly' is based on eyewitness accounts of the appearance of the Manhattan Project Laboratories from 1943-1945. What fun to visit this incredible museum, learn about the atomic age, nuclear medicine, nuclear energy and so much more and then see this incredible movie. Check out our visit on Public Television or Amazon Video anytime!

The American Museum of Natural History is the largest natural history museum in the world. The entire museum spans 4 city blocks and they've just opened the new Gilder Center. It features new galleries, an insectarium, a butterfly vivarium and floor to ceiling collections. We can't wait to make a return visit. Check out our adventure in the Mignone Halls of Gems and Minerals on Public Television and Amazon Video.

BEHIND – the – SCENES: THE STERLING HILL MINING MUSEUM

“I have to admit, when I first stepped into the Sterling Hill Mine in Ogdensburg, NJ with museum director Bill Kroth, I was keeping my eye on the exit. This former iron and zinc mine has a long and colorful history and the Sterling Hill Mining Museum shares it perfectly. Stories of hauntings kept popping into my mind until the lights were turned off and the incredible fluorescent zinc came alive all around us. It was one of those ‘museum moments’ I will never forget. Talking to Doug Francisco, one of miners that actually worked in the mine for many yrs. gave me a whole new perspective on hard work and our visit to the ‘off limits’ quarry pit was mind blowing too. I’m ready to go back again! “
